Rector's Reflection by the Reverend Joy Elkins

We are in that time of year known as holiday season, especially in an area like this. Holidays mean different things for different people, for some sun and sand, for others adventure, culture, wildlife, or simply some peace and quiet. Taking a break from pressured and busy lives helps us rest and recharge. But how many of us take a break from the pressure of digital technology?

Digital technology dominates every walk of life now. Without doubt it has brought us benefits, e.g. the greater ability to share knowledge and expertise, especially in medicine and science, the opening up of new horizons, and the sharing of views and ideas. But there are downsides. Some, such as social media pressure on the young and vulnerable and the spreading of hate are very much in the news. Not talked about so much is the relentlessness of being constantly connected, the constant popping of messages into our inboxes, the demand for quick answers, and always being on the end of a phone. Not to mention AI chatbots (a company has just informed me they've 'sacked' theirs in the interest of customer care!), the way that digital devices easily become addictive and distract us from things around us. I hear a lot of frustration but "Well that's just how things are now, not much you can do about it". But how about giving ourselves a break?

Present lifestyles make it difficult to ignore our devices totally but maybe we can find times, whether on holiday or regularly through the year when we can set our digital devices aside for a 'time-out'. If necessary, tell those who need to know that you will only check your messages at certain times of day. Use the time to give undivided attention to family and friends without feeling the need to glance at your phone. Enjoy nature without distraction, paying attention to our big, beautiful world. Breathe in the atmosphere, 'Smell the roses' as they say. Find some hobbies other than looking at a screen and typing on a keyboard.

If we have no problem with taking a holiday to recharge, then why not take a break from digital devices if needed. It is simply about caring for oneself. The Christian message is full of God's love for his people and in Matthew 22:39 we read "we are to love our neighbours as ourselves". The writer accepts that we love ourselves but to do that we must recognise our needs and do what we can to meet them.

Happy time-outs everyone, whatever form they take.

Revd Joy Elkins

The story of a hymn: It is well with my soul

Horatio Gates Spafford, (1828-1888), the writer of this hymn, was a Presbyterian layman, successful lawyer and property investor in Chicago. He was married to Anna and had five children. Sadly, their lives were blighted by a series of tragedies. In 1871, his four-year-old son died from scarlet fever. Then the great fire in Chicago created huge business losses. In 1873 Spafford planned a family holiday to Britain meaning to join his friend's evangelic meetings. He was unable to sail, due to unfinished business, but his wife and their four daughters went ahead. Tragically a major collision at sea sunk their ship. All four daughters were drowned, but Anna miraculously survived. The telegram she sent simply stated, 'Saved Alone'.

Devastated by loss he travelled to meet Anna. In the location of his daughters' drowning, he was inspired to write 'It is Well with My Soul', which demonstrates strong faith, finding peace in the face of overwhelming grief, and points to the presence of God through all acutely traumatic times. They had three further children, but their son also died from scarlet fever. In 1881 Horatio and Anna left the US and settled in Jerusalem. They looked after the poor, needy and sick and took in homeless children. The music was written by Philip Bliss and named after the ship, Ville Du Havre, in which their daughters lost their lives.

When peace like a river, attendeth my way,
When sorrows like sea billows roll;
Whatever my lot, Thou hast taught me to say
It is well, it is well, with my soul.

It is well, (it is well),
With my soul, (with my soul)
It is well, it is well, with my soul.

Shop Fakenham!

Started in late 2024 by Claire Howard and Melanie Harriss, this is a group of independent traders and small business owners who work together to celebrate our town and support one another.

The aims of Shop Fakenham are to collaborate to boost local trade, share ideas and resources, and promote Fakenham town centre as a vibrant retail and leisure destination. Since forming, we've gained local press coverage, launched an email newsletter, collaborated with other community groups, and held regular meetings. We also worked with Aldiss to create the map board in their car park and have gathered over 1,000 signatures on a petition regarding 9 Norwich Street.

We're working to revive a Saturday food market, and to get a dedicated town website up and running, complete with event listings and a directory of Fakenham's brilliant shops and attractions. Together, we're working hard to make Fakenham a town we're all proud to be part of.

If you are a retailer or a community group and would like to be added to our email database, please email shopfakenham@gmail.com

Town Council news

High Streets matter

One of the recurring themes on social media is the decline of the high street, loss of banks and the rise of online shopping. Fakenham is fortunate, therefore, to be included in the High Streets Matter initiative being jointly managed by Norfolk County Council and North Norfolk District Council. Funding and expertise are available for retailers to boost their businesses. It is early days as the scheme was only announced in May, but it is an excellent initiative and, as a town council, we want to take an active role in supporting our 'high street'. We have new independent retailers setting up shop here and thriving despite challenging times. Elsewhere in this edition of The Beacon, you will read of the work being done by Shop Fakenham. All good stuff.

Fakenham allotments

Many residents of the area will know that Fakenham has three sets of allotments. Occupancy levels are good in two of them, but there are some vacancies at Grove Lane. If you, or someone you know, would like to take an allotment to grow vegetables and fruit to feed their family - and to stay fit - please contact the council office on 01328 853653 or email: info@fakenhamtowncouncil.gov.uk

In the 13th century Fakenham's first rectory stood in what is now the Tesco car park and in the 19th century it moved to the building that is now Sowerby's Estate agent

But if you went to 21 Gladstone Road in the 1940s, the building that is the rectory today, you would have found yourself at the police station!

This photo, that was donated by Fakenham Heritage Group, shows Inspector Arthur Bryer standing in front of it in 1950.

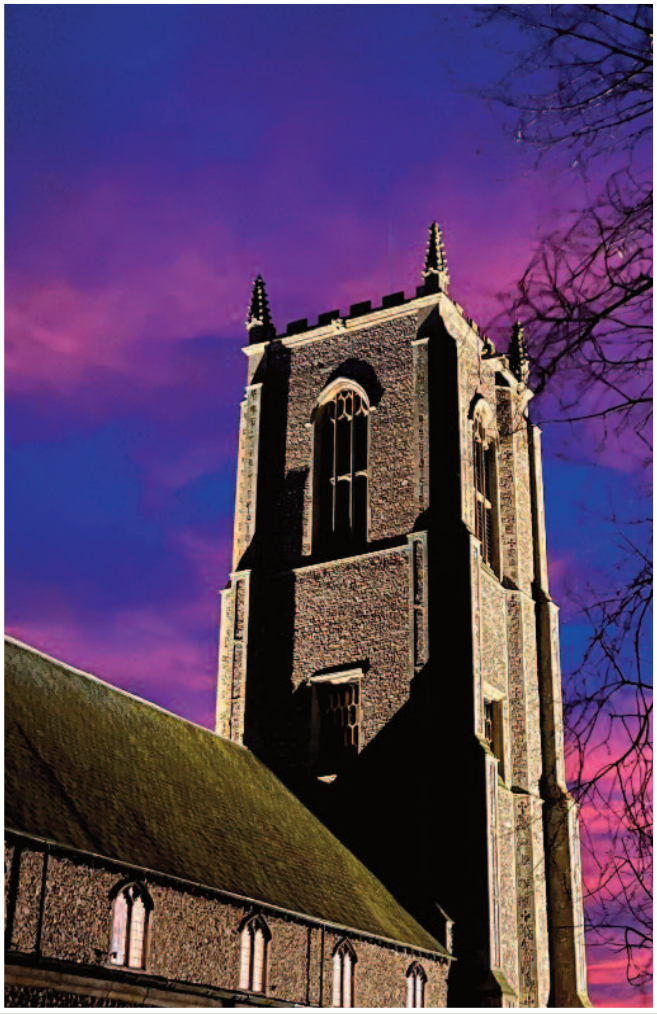

The police station moved to its current site on Norwich Road in 1952

If you would like to see more of our huge collection of photos, videos, scrapbooks and displays of Fakenham's history you can come along to one of our meetings in church, from 2.00 to 4.00 on the last Tuesday of every month. You can also see them on www.fakenhamcommunityarchive.weebly.com.

Floodlighting Sponsorship

It is a joy to see St Peter and St Paul Church floodlit during the evenings, especially in the dark winter months.
You can keep our Church beautifully lit by sponsoring one of our floodlights for £15 a week, perhaps to celebrate a special occasion or to remember a loved one. If you are a taxpayer, you can gift-aid your contribution. Our form gives details of how to make your sponsorship payment. Dedication details will be displayed on the Church noticeboard, our website and included in The Beacon. You can also donate anonymously.
If you would like to sponsor our floodlighting please use the form available from church or on our website or call us on 01328 862268 for more information.

Old Fakenhamian

Since marrying my Dutch husband Paul, I have become more aware of the historic links between his homeland and East Anglia. The rich farmland of the Fens is due to the Dutch knowledge of reclamation and drainage, but I once found a link which was much closer to home and I would like to tell you about it in this month's column.

Many years ago, Paul and I were attending a large party in the Hague given by friends of his. I got into conversation with a very charming gentleman (as one does!) and on his discovering that I came from Norfolk asked me whether I knew of Quarles. I was totally taken aback. For Quarles is a tiny hamlet owned by the Holkham Estate to the landside of the Hall. The only reason I know it is that my son Peter attended a play group run by a lovely girl called Sally whose husband worked for the Holkham Estate as a stockman and they lived there in a farmhouse. Obviously, I asked him how he knew such a tiny place which frankly many people who have lived in Norfolk all their lives have never heard of.

He explained that his forebears were Protestant Huguenots and had fled France due to the persecution during the 17th Century arriving in Norfolk as so many others did. It was the Huguenot weavers in Norwich who kept canaries in cages in their workshops who gave rise to the name and symbol of the Norwich Football Club. They were also creators of the highly prized Norwich Shawls and are behind the name of Strangers' Hall in the City. So it makes complete sense that this gentleman's family must have been trading into our ports, probably Wells, so their predicament may have been brought to the attention of the Earl of Leicester who offered them asylum on the Holkham Estate. Subsequently, the family moved to Holland where they settled permanently.

Quarles has always struck me as a very un-Norfolk name with our Hams and Thorpes and now I know why, for the gentleman gave me his card and on it was the surname Quarles Van Offord. In the car on the way home I told Paul of my encounter and read out the name on the card. "Good heavens Gilly, they are the Rothschilds of Holland!" he exclaimed. Some years later the couple whose party we had attended came to stay and I took them to Quarles so they could see the place where their friend's ancestors had found a safe haven. They were surprised at what a tiny place it was - basically, a farmhouse, some farm buildings and a post box!

At another party in the Hague I found myself sitting next to the Dutch Ambassador to the Court of St. James, I told him my anecdote and he introduced me to his wife whose maiden name was...yes, you've guessed it - Quarles Van Offord!

Let's meet . . . Dan Andrews

Dan Andrews is a familiar figure around town. Currently the face of Barclays Bank, he is in attendance at the Community Centre four full days each week. Dan was born and largely brought up in Fakenham, and lives here still. At fourteen, Dan was a paper boy at Paper Chain, Bridge Street, now Morrisons. He graduated to working in the shop on Saturdays. One day when he was 18, a woman went into the shop and told him that Barclays bank was looking for cashiers. He applied and was offered a position in the Fakenham branch. He enjoyed the work and went on to be promoted to counter manager. Finally, he became a personal banker. Some of his customers have grown up with him, and he is seen as a trusted figure in the community. He is married to Helen, a former manager at Heritage House and they have two children, Emily, 11 and William, 7. Dan chairs the board of trustees for Fakenham Charities, able to provide help to Fakenham and Hempton families in need. He has recently been appointed as a trustee of the Community centre.

What is the most underrated aspect of Fakenham? Its beautiful river walks.

If you could change something about yourself? I'd be less willing to please, and develop saying 'no'.

A gadget you couldn't do without? My phone, containing just about everything.

Your pet hate? Negativity. It sucks the life out of everything.

Who has been a great influence in your life? Helen.

Your greatest strength? Helen responds that Dan is a great communicator. Dan says being a business man. And weakness? Both spontaneity and being too willing to please.

Your earliest memory? Waking up early in the morning and seeing Santa deliver a bag of presents. I was about 6 or 7. Were you scared? Definitely not.

Have you ever been grateful for the kindness of a stranger? I had a puncture on my way to Syderstone, and had never changed a tyre. I knocked on the nearest house, and the man just came out and did it for me. It turned out he was a car mechanic!

Is religious faith a part of your life? Yes. I'm a Christian.

What would you buy on impulse? A barbecue. We socialise a lot with friends and have quite a few barbecues. Anything else? Yes, I'll book a weekend away with the family.

Where do you go? Anywhere with history and old abbeys, priories and ruins. Helen adds that Dan and the children love it, but she sometimes wants something more relaxing.

What concerns you about modern life? Not so much on impulse, but an extra camera. (Half the cost of a holiday, says Diana!)

What concerns you about modern life? The loss of communication skills without a phone.

Do you have any advice you'd pass on? For young people to learn a trade.

Helen, how would you describe Dan? He's very friendly and outgoing and is a lovely person to be around. He's a wonderful father and never gets grumpy.

What do you like best about your job? Being able to help people and this gets repeated in my private life. And the most difficult? When a bereavement or early bereavement occurs. We are there to help and it is rewarding to do so.

What's the secret of happiness? Living life to the full and taking all the opportunities offered.

What do you do in your spare time? I'm interested in coin collecting and have researched and produced a magazine, published locally. I like visiting relatives, seeing ruins, doing charity work, and metal detecting. Have you found anything in particular? Nothing of value as yet, but an interesting coin, a Nuremberg Jeton and the usual crop of rusty nails.

Do you have any ambitions? Yes, I'd like to become a financial advisor and would need to gain a formal qualification to do so.

Do you have an interest in music? I listen to pop/rock when I'm having a bath and as a family we enjoy going to musicals.

Where would you like to visit that you haven't been to? Norway, especially to see the ice caps and glaciers.

What did you learn from your parents? Respect and to treat people how I like to be treated.

What have you learnt from life? That nothing is given to you; you have to work for it. And from money? That it doesn't buy happiness.

A guilty pleasure? Whisky from time to time.

Do you have ambitions for your children? Yes, for them to be healthy and happy.

Tidy or Untidy? I'm very organised in my own way.

Lark or Owl? I'm the owl, Helen is the lark.

TOWN TALK

We used to have regular triathlons in Fakenham many years ago. I always took part. They were tough but enjoyable. The first 'leg' was to canoe from the town bridge to Sculthorpe Mill; the second to cycle back to Fakenham; the third and final challenge to run out to the three arches by the river and back again. As far as I recall, everyone survived to 'fight another day'. Anyway, the post-triathlon gatherings were always good fun and a chance to exchange experiences (I once took the wrong route for a mile or two and had to turn back). Just recently, some superman swam the English Channel, cycled across countries such as Iran and Iraq, prior to heading for Nepal where, of all things, he climbed the highest peak in the world, Mount Everest. Some triathlon!

In 1963 I set my sights much lower and decided to hitchhike to Australia to visit my sister who lived in Sydney. I carried all I had in a rucksack, including a tent. At the time, hitching was a safe way of getting from place to place although delays were often inevitable. My route beyond Turkey included Syria, Iraq and Iran, before reaching Pakistan and India. With a Union Flag painted on my rucksack I was very lucky as it often prompted drivers to stop. From India I travelled south through Malaysia before arriving in Singapore. No chance of hitching from there so I used the last of my savings to fly to Darwin and then crossed Australia down to Sydney. A bus driver dropped me off at the top of my sister's road and I spent that first might camped on their lawn. It was New Year's Eve, 1963, so they were all out carousing somewhere.

Within a couple of months, I found myself a flat and a job in North Sydney. As a useful footballer I was signed up by a team called Hakoah, set up by members of the Jewish community. We were successful and even managed to win the Australia Cup one year. To cut a long story short I stayed 'Down Under' for three years doing lots of travelling and even climbed Ayers Rock. I was young enough to attempt all manner of challenges and am so glad I did so. I eventually decided to return home via a different route, taking in Indonesia, Japan and even the Olympics in Mexico City. But that's another story…

Remembering those who came home

With the recent VE Day celebrations still in our memory, and Remembrance Day yet to come, the fatalities and victims of war are never far from our minds.

Anne Stephenson's father, George Edward Galloway, was lucky enough to return home from the Second World War. He was mentioned in despatches three times and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for Bravery at Sea. The return to family life was not an easy one, neither for him, nor his family. Anne's poem poignantly captures an evening after her father returned home.

To Dad

We were dressed in our best frocks with our comfortable dancing shoes in brown paper bags.
Our Mother elegantly dressed, her dark hair just washed and her green eyes alight with the expectation of dancing
the night away.
Living in a garrison town there was no shortage of partners.
Dancing was as easy as breathing to our mother and we were all hewn from the same rock.
We left you sitting staring into the fire.
At half time I was sent home with your tot of whiskey in a brown jug.
I was happy. You were home again. I was about to get an education and we had a bathroom.
But there you were, still sitting staring into the fire.
Were you remembering your companions, the easy banter, the flow of adrenaline when mines had been located, the feeling of being alive and living on the edge? Were you thinking you had come full circle – the gun in the cupboard still needed to feed your family when working twelve hours a day could not?
I was young - life was calling.
I left you staring into the fire.
