Rector's reflections on Christmas and the Path to Peace

As we gather to celebrate the Christmas season, John Lennon's words, "So this is Christmas, and what have you done? Another year over, a new one just begun," prompt us to reflect on the past year and embrace the new one with hope.

The year 2025 has been difficult. Conflicts in the Middle East and Ukraine, alongside numerous global struggles, weigh on our hearts. The environmental crisis looms large, threatening the future of our younger generations. Every part of our precious planet feels the impact of these challenges. I am sure we all had our personal struggles too. Illness, bereavement, cost of living struggles and general everyday worries about modern day life.

Over two thousand years ago, a child was born under extraordinary circumstances. A new star appeared, guiding wise men from the East to this special birth, which they honoured with gifts. Saint Francis of Assisi later immortalized this scene with the Nativity display, a cherished tradition in churches around the world, replicated here in Fakenham too.

The birth of Jesus continues to be a beacon of hope for all. Jesus entered a world filled with chaos, much like today. The land we now call Israel was under Roman rule, and there were troubles and conflicts. There was a wide gap between the rich and the poor, and life expectancy was much lower than today. Despite progress, we still grapple with living in harmony with one another and the natural world, emphasising our responsibility to act.

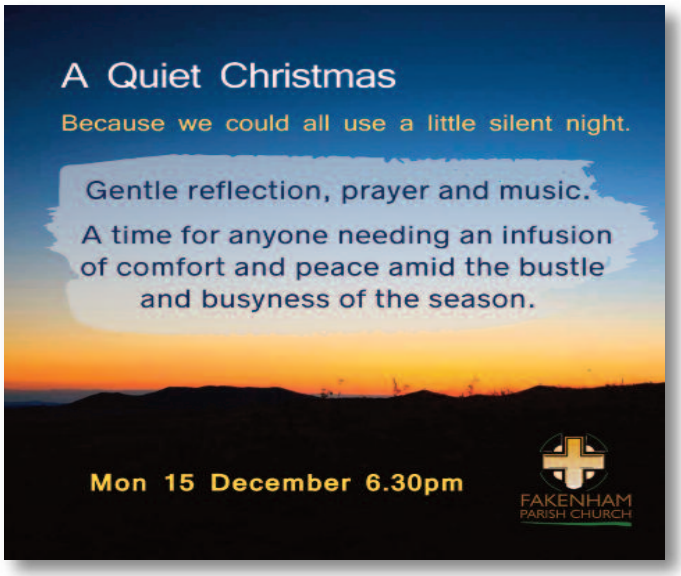

The baby Jesus brought a great Love that started to transform all who he met. Jesus' teachings continue to inspire us with their divine wisdom: "Love your neighbour as yourself," "Love your enemies," "Love those who speak ill of you," and "Forgive those who hurt you." These challenges call us to embody love and forgiveness, even when it is difficult.

True peace begins within our own hearts. This Christmas, can we all commit to the path of love and reconciliation? Is there anything you could do that would be a profound gift to yourself and others? Global peace is unattainable without personal responsibility and acts of love.

As we celebrate this sacred season, I wish you all a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year (when it comes). 'Let's hope it's a good one, without any fear.'

Revd Tracy Jessop

Town Council News

Calling all gardeners
When the days are short and the nights long and dark, it can be a challenge to think about spring. But now is a great time to consider taking on an allotment. There are lots of benefits, both to the bank balance and to your general health. The council has kept allotment rents deliberately low in comparison with other authorities, which means that it will not cost you a fortune, an important consideration when times are tight. And, of course, when the crops are ready to be harvested, you will be saving on the weekly shop and enjoying the satisfaction of eating what you have grown by your own efforts. Another benefit is taking free exercise out in the fresh air. Allotments can be hard work and need commitment of a few hours on a regular basis, but the rewards are enjoyable; in more ways than one!
For more information contact the office on 01328 853653 or, if you prefer email: info@fakenhamtowncouncil.gov.uk

Hat and Natter
We are very lucky in Fakenham to have lots of different support groups in town. Spending time with friends and acquaintances who share your interests is good for everyone. The extraordinary Pat, at her Extraordinary Hat Company has started a Hat and Natter group, which will meet on Friday afternoons from 2.30pm at the shop. At the time of writing I cannot tell you if wearing a hat is compulsory, but can tell you that the natter will be good fun and an excellent way of passing dull winter afternoons with good company in a lovely interesting shop. Call in to see Pat when you're in town for more information.

And finally…
A very warm welcome to the fabulous new Post Office, our Postmaster, Mark and his terrific team. Everyone is delighted to have this impressive shop open for business. Kay and Becky, who served the town diligently in Millers Walk, were recognised at the official opening of the new Post Office by stunning bouquets from close neighbour, Nick at Scent with Love.
Don't forget to buy your stamps for those Christmas cards from our smart new shop and...

Happy Christmas to all Beacon readers from Fakenham Town Council

Review of the year in pictures – Fakenham Parish Church

Let's meet . . . Good King Wenceslas

I was full of Christmas cheer upon hearing that King Wenceslas had agreed to talk with me. Meeting the genuine subject of a beloved Christmas carol, is both humbling and joyful. He was not strictly a king, but was made one, later in his life, by Rome, having heard of his good deeds. The carol tells the story of the tenth-century king of Bohemia, (now part of the Czech Republic) who goes on a long slow journey, to give firewood, flesh and wine to a poor peasant on the Feast of Stephen,-which commemorates the first Christian martyr,-and falls on December 26th. It was harsh, snow-laden, wintry weather, and during the journey his page states he can go no further. He is encouraged to continue by following the king's footprints, step by step, through the deep snow.

Has history has got it right about your not being born a King? I was not a King but it was conferred on me by prominent writers, and later became a reality.

How does it feel, being the subject of a carol? I'm both delighted and bemused.

Do you recall the specific occasion, as sung in the carol? I made many such journeys and tried to help the poor in other ways, yet I do remember this particular one. This was because my page's request he go no further, was quite a bold, risky thing for him to do; but he followed my advice and we both found the poor man's dwelling. The man and his family were overjoyed.

What about your family life? My parents were brought up quite differently, which caused problems. My mother was cruel and murdered my grandmother who was Regent before I was old enough to rule after my father died.

That must have been a dreadful shock? It was devastating. My grandmother was like a mother to me. And I felt I could no longer trust my actual mother.

Did your parents have differing ideals for living? Mother was from the pagan tradition, and my father a Christian. I was brought up as a Christian and focussed on faith.

What did you learn from your parents? Determination from both, and from my father, generosity to those who had little.

What happened when you were 21? I was keen to spread the influence of the church, and move away from paganism. As in modern politics, I needed allies and worked with the support of Christian clergy which relied heavily on the growing influence of Latin Christianity.

Did the people support you? Some of the time, but I was set on building churches, including the foundation of the Church of St. Vitus in Prague, later a cathedral.

How do you perceive today's world? It was a smaller place then, but it's striking how the same sorts of issues persist. Ideologies, conflicts, lust for power and greed are ever present.

What part of your rule, are you proudest of? Instead of being pulled into conflict and war, I tried, as much as possible, to negotiate with neighbouring states.

Was this successful? Largely. Modern historians may have more to say.

Are you a man of music? I love medieval sacred music, but also grew up with singers whose voices would be interspersed by the instruments of the time, such as plucked flutes, stringed lyres, harps, recorder, (animal) horns and trumpets.

How about reading? Most of all I love reading what historians have made of events and life as I knew it.

What is your greatest strength? Sharing with those who had little or nothing.

And weakness? My love of good food.

Do you have advice that you'd like to pass on? Think twice before making any comment to the detriment of another. Especially as you can't make any judgement without full knowledge of the facts.

Do you find anything irksome in modern society? My biggest irritation is with the use of the word Bohemian. It implies an unconventional, self-seeking and artistic lifestyle. The term bears no relationship to the values of people who lived in my land of Bohemia.

Is that the worst thing? No. It's the use of the abbreviation Boho. It would be like me referring to your magazine as BeCo! .

You are all invited to our Christmas Craft Fair in the church and in the Old School Hall on Saturday 6th, where you can top-up your Christmas shopping with something special. Browse the glorious range of artefacts crafted by our gifted local crafters, check the Home Baking stall, where among other treats you'll be able to snap up some festive cakes and preserves, or some of James's Sausage Rolls – the stuff of legend – and enjoy the friendly calm and bright atmosphere, with entertainment assured by Hindolveston musician Richard Blake. An early music specialist, Richard is especially keen on flute and dulcimer. We also offer an enormous selection of jigsaw puzzles at bargain prices, to enhance your family festivities.
The period of Advent, in which we anticipate the arrival of the long-awaited Messiah, helps us remember and appreciate the message of hope for humanity that underlies Christmas: we certainly have much need of hope and joy this year. Let's share it.

A very Happy Christmas to you all from us at Christ Church, Fulmodeston.

Fakenham and District Community Archive

You may or may not agree wth the common saying that "Christmas is really only for the children" (the title of one Steve Turner's well-known poems) but this month's photo from the Archive is a good example of how magical they always find this time of the year.
These smiling children are gathered at the Stibbard village hall in the 1950s, holding the presents they've been given by Santa (really Dougie Daniels in disguise).
If you'd like to see any more of Fakenham Archive's huge collection of videos, displays and scapbooks of Fakenham and the villages, just come along to any of our meetings at church from 2.00 to 4.00 on the last Tuesday of every month, or look on www.fakenhamcommunityarchive.weebly.com
