Reflection

I have spent several months suffering from a sore back. At the time of writing, I'm gradually getting back to normal, assisted by various Occupational Therapists and Carers who have been most helpful. But I realised fairly quickly that this was going to be a very slow process. I wasn't going to recover in a few weeks, it was likely to take several months and I was going to have to wait before I'd be able to live my life as I used to do. But I don't like waiting very much. I'm impatient and worry when whatever I'm going to be doing will happen or whether for some reason or other it won't. I don't know, but I suspect that most people are like this.

At present, we are in the Church season of Lent: a time of waiting and preparation before Easter. During the forty days of Lent, Christians remember that Jesus was led out into the wilderness to fast and pray before starting his ministry. We are told that it was during this time that he learned what God wanted him to do during his life on earth. He might not have known this, but he was waiting for guidance. Once he had received it, he gathered a small group to come with him as he went out and about teaching and healing people. We know very little about Jesus' life before this time but the Bible tells us what he did during those few years before his arrest, crucifixion and resurrection. So those weeks of waiting were important and guided his future ministry.

It is fairly easy to want to rush into something without that important time of waiting and preparing, just as I'd love to feel that my back could get better tomorrow. But that often can't happen. Usually, we have to wait as patiently as we can. I don't know if you 'give something up' for Lent. I do and I sometimes find it quite hard to keep it up through Lent. But when we reach Easter and I can enjoy it again, the relief is great. I'm sure that the time of waiting helps to contribute to my relief.

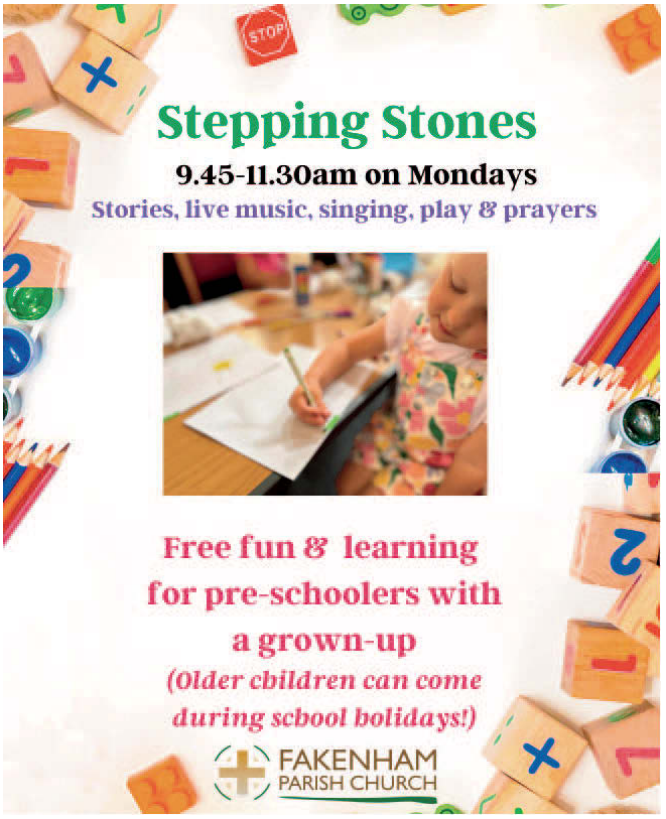

Those days and weeks and even months of waiting help us to appreciate whatever it is that we've been waiting for that much better when we get there. So, if you are waiting for some important event, or for a specific change in your life or even for the end of Lent, be patient and ask God to help and guide you as you wait.

Makeover for the Garden of Remembrance

The renovation of the Garden of Remembrance reached completion last month. The project involved significant effort, including carefully lifting and cleaning more than 100 memorial tablets, clearing the ground thoroughly, and ensuring the surface was level throughout.

Any Spring bulbs discovered were replanted towards the front of the garden. To ensure the garden remains easy to care for in the years ahead, a weed-proof membrane was installed beneath the surface. Memorial tablets were then carefully repositioned, before covering the surface with locally sourced pea shingle. This addition will help to keep maintenance requirements to a minimum, preserving the garden's appearance for visitors.

We would like to extend our sincere thanks to all who contributed to the success of this project. Special appreciation goes to Fakenham Garden Centre, our contractor for their invaluable support, as well as the church volunteers for their hard work. Their combined efforts have truly made a difference in transforming the Garden of Remembrance into a more welcoming and tranquil space.

We hope people will appreciate the enhancements and find the improved garden a fitting and peaceful place to remember their loved ones.

Let's meet… Claire Howard

Claire Howard is the owner and sole producer in her jewellery shop in Market Place, aptly named Claire Howard Jewellery. The business opened in August 2024. Although born in Surrey, her grandparents lived near West Raynham and her father was keen to return to Norfolk. They did so in 1974, living in Toftrees. Claire was a budding linguist and studied French and Italian at Lancaster University. Whilst visiting Italy, she fell in love with the country and lived there for a while. She came back to do a teaching degree and her first post was teaching languages at the College of West Anglia, followed by teaching at The Glebe school in Hunstanton. She then decided to move into primary teaching and did this until 2015. She threw herself into the stay-at-home-mum role, but when her son started school, felt that her life was needing fresh direction. Her mother is creative and she and her sister bought Claire a course in silversmithing. She met with Richard Nason, whom many might remember at the Parish Church craft fairs, and he taught Claire everything she'd need to run a silversmithing business. Initially, Claire successfully worked from home doing craft fairs. Then coming full circle, she took the risk of opening a shop. Her workbench is against the window of the shop, and everyone can see her at her work. Claire is married to Peter, whom she met whilst teaching, and they have a son, aged 15.

What's the most underrated thing about Fakenham? Its supportive and encouraging people. They feel they want recognition for the town and I have felt well supported.

If you could change something about yourself, what might it be? Overthinking.

Is there a gadget you couldn't do without? Yes, my ear-phones, so good whilst running and for the music.

Who has been a great influence in your life? I have many female friends and their friendship is full of creativity, positive thinking and resilience. I wouldn't underestimate it.

What is your greatest strength? I think my compassion and kindness.

And weakness? Lack of confidence.

Your greatest challenge? I waited a long time to have children, but we have a wonderful son.

What is your earliest memory? Being in my parents' garden, aged about three or four, with their black labrador. They always had a dog, and so do I. They are special beings in our lives.

Have you ever been grateful for the kindness of a stranger? Yes. Richard who taught me silversmithing, repeated what was a kindness offered to him, by giving me his tools.

Is a religious faith part of your life? I was brought up a Catholic and still hold many of their values.

What might you buy on impulse? Books and tools.

What concerns you about modern life? The reliance on digital services for accessing news. Its impartiality is questionable.

How would your husband describe you? Peter appeared and said, 'compassionate and caring'.

What do you no longer worry about? Marking schoolbooks, and having to adhere to a rigid timetable.

What are you really good at? I hope my son would say, being a Mum.

Any particular ambitions? To make this business a success. B+ isn't enough.

And advice you'd like to pass on? Always be kind. It's how I live my life.

What's the best thing about your work? I can take a silver wire and turn it into a piece of jewellery that is special to somebody.

And the most difficult? The pressure on my elbow when I'm making jewellery, and secondly, using social media and marketing.

What do you do to relax? I exercise by walking, running and swimming and I'm a great reader.

Do you have a favourite book? I love reading, and top of the list is Rebecca, by Daphne Du Maurier, followed by Mrs Benson's Beetle, by Rachel Joyce.

What are you currently reading? The Great Hippo Hotel by Alexander McCall Smith. It's great to learn about Botswana, where the series is set.

And your favourite music? I like the Stone Roses and Mumford & Sons.

Is there a person you admire? Mary Portas. She has amazing drive and passion for the high street. What she did for charity shops, for example, was phenomenal.

What did you learn from your parents? Mum is creative and has a big open heart. My Dad was gentle but driven.

Your ideal weekend? Spent outdoors with Peter and our son. Back at home, good food, good film and lots of laughs.

What has life taught you? To never give up, no matter how black; there's always a silver lining.

Your guilty pleasure? Cake and mince pies.

What would be your epitaph? 'She was a loving wife and mother.'

Tidy or untidy? Creatively tidy!

August - not a quiet month at all!
A Beacon reader wrote to me gently challenging my comment in last month's edition that 'August was a quiet month'. She pointed out that the Arts Festival had taken place and I had ignored it. Mea culpa! I have apologised to Richard Crook too.

Bee Squared project update
Last month the Bee Squared project was announced and, as you read this edition, packets of wild flower seeds are available free of charge from the Town Council offices, the Library and the parish church. All the schools in the town have taken delivery of packets for children to take home to create their own wildflower patch. Do join in if you are able to make Fakenham more bee friendly.

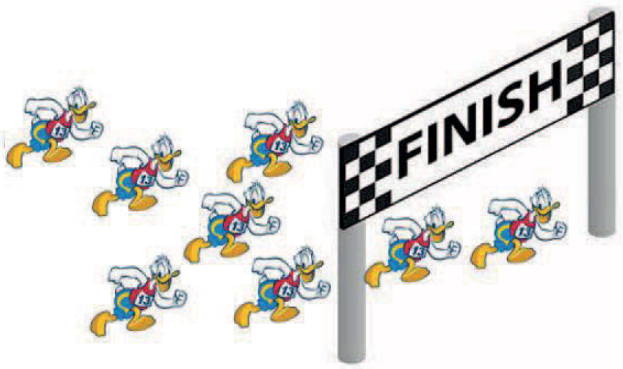

Swimming pool update
Good progress is being made at the pool site with the excavation for the pool itself underway. The contractors are keeping up with the timetable, despite the very wet weather in February. It's not quite time yet to dig out the swimming costumes, but it certainly won't be long!

Fakenham Easter Running Festival – 5th April

Active Fakenham is delighted to announce the return of the Easter Sunday Running Festival on 5th April, in Fakenham town centre. The event will once again bring a lively and welcoming atmosphere to the Market Place, with stalls, food and music. To ensure the safety of participants, a temporary road closure will be in place around the town centre. We apologise for any inconvenience caused.

As in previous years, arrangements have been made to facilitate as much access as possible to Fakenham Parish Church. Volunteer marshals will be positioned at key access points to assist residents and visitors throughout the morning. Where possible, visitors are encouraged to make use of the free Tesco car park. The main races affecting access will take place between: 10:30am – 11:30am and 11:30am – 12:00pm

Active Fakenham kindly asks for patience and courtesy towards the volunteer marshals, whose role is to help ensure the event runs smoothly and safely for everyone.

The festival features events for all ages and abilities, including: 5K Road Race, 1K Fun Run and Under-5s Toddle'n'Trike.

Entries are now open, and participants of all abilities are warmly welcomed. Active Fakenham looks forward to another enjoyable Easter Sunday and hopes residents and visitors alike enjoy the day.

The story of a hymn – "I, the Lord of sea and sky"

Our hymn this month poses significant questions of the singer or reader, and the chorus affords an answer to the call of the Lord, via the singer. The writer, Dan Schutte, is an American hymn writer, born in 1947. This hymn, written in 1979, is the one he's most associated with, at least in the UK. He was 31, a Jesuit and a theology student, (a priest upon graduation) when he was asked to write a hymn quite quickly (2-3 days) for the ordination to the Deaconry of a good friend. The Deacon wanted the hymn to include images of the word of God, the light of Christ and the bread and wine. Schutte, in not quite knowing which angle to take, based the text on Isiah 6:8 and 1Samuel 3:4,. The hymn, went down exceptionally well at the service and indeed remains popular.

Unusually, for this article, the writer is also the composer of the tune. Listening to his recording on You Tube, the tempo was rather slower than is normally sung here, and other recordings play it somewhat faster. Currently, Dan Schutte, no longer a Jesuit, likes to visit churches for a service and talk about what he refers to as 'the journey with God'. He is never short of invitations. He recalls specifically writing this tune 'at his desk with his guitar' as a 'dialogue between God and humanity'.

I, the Lord of sea and sky,
I have heard my people cry.
All who dwell in dark and sin,
My hand will save.
I who made the stars of night,
I will make their darkness bright.
Who will bear my light to them?
Whom shall I send?

Chorus:-

Here I am, Lord. Is it I, Lord?
I have heard you calling in the night.
I will go, Lord, if you lead me.
I will hold your people in my heart.

FAKENHAM AND DISTRICT COMMUNITY ARCHIVE

This month's photograph from the Archive should provide the answer to a question some people probably ask themselves when driving along the road from town to Dereham and notice the ruined tower in the field on the left.

This is what's remains of St Margarets church, once the centre of the lost village of Pudding Norton. Built in the 12th century, it started to become a ruin before the 1600s, after which the landowner, A. W. Biddulph, ousted the villagers to be able to use the land for grazing.

The tower became a grade 2 listed building and was partly restored in the 1950s and the 1990s.

The photo was donated by the Fakenham Heritage Group.

If you'd like to see any more of our huge collection of photos, scrapbooks, slide shows and videos of Fakenham in the past just come to one of our meetings in church, from 2.00 to 4.00 on the last Tuesday of every month. You could also look on our website, www.fakenhamcommunityarchive.weeby.com.

Remembering people and businesses at the heart of the town – Powell's Saddlery and Benbow's greengrocer

Gilly Foortse writes … Thirty-eight years ago, when I returned home to Fakenham, the town was pretty much as I had left it in 1973. The Aldiss Store dominated the Upper Market, the Hardware was still on Bridge Street, and we had Finn's the fishmongers, four butchers' shops, two greengrocers, Moore's the bakers and a couple of others. The Crown (had a disastrous makeover in the interim – how I missed 'the ladies Powder Room') was still there, as was the Star Pub, and so the list goes on. Many of you reading this will remember the town as it was then and have witnessed how it has changed over the last decades.

This month I would like to pay tribute to an old friend who sadly passed away before Christmas, namely Michael Boucher, who inherited Powell's Saddlery from his uncle and aunt in the Seventies. Taylor's café was the site of this extremely old Fakenham business which also owned all the land and buildings to the rear of the shop and dated back to the time when the horse was king of transport, farming and commerce. There is a photograph of all the employees standing proudly outside the shop in Taylor's which is certainly worth a look when next you visit.

Michael (Mike) Boucher was the last owner of Powell's, by this time no longer a saddlery but a country clothing and equestrian goods retailer. Later Michael also opened a sports shop on the other side of the road (now the Salvation Army charity shop). He was the designated supplier of sports clothes for the Grammar School. One day, years ago, Mike, his youngest daughter Alex, my son, and I were rummaging about in the upper floor of the original shop and came across boxes of green gym knickers left over from that time. How well I remember them – worn for gym practice and under the divided maroon skirt for hockey!

Mike was a very self-effacing man and a hero in disguise: he brought up his three children on his own after the breakup of his marriage and involved himself in town activities including being a member of Rotary and chairman of the squash club for many years. As any of you who remember him will know, he was a thoroughly decent bloke, much loved and respected. In retirement he was an active and enthusiastic volunteer at the Hawk and Owl Trust. We were fortunate to have such a man in our midst for so many years.

Richard Crook writes … Benbow's, Fakenham's long-standing greengrocer, has supported Active Fakenham for many years and in many forms: sponsoring prizes, selling our bags, making donations, distributing leaflets, and displaying posters. Just as importantly, their friendly and helpful staff were always ready to share information—and even offer a dog treat or two.

It is therefore with real sadness and disappointment that we have seen Benbow's close its doors for the final time. This closure made me reflect on what Benbow's meant not only to me (and the dog), but to Active Fakenham and to Fakenham as a town. Without the ability to pop in for mushrooms or fresh fruit, I will undoubtedly walk into town less often and there will clearly be a loss to the town centre as a whole. If town centres are to survive and thrive, they must adapt—and community events like those organised by Active Fakenham are becoming increasingly important in giving small towns something special to offer.

Our programme of fun, inclusive events focused on wellbeing, the arts, sport, and culture plays a vital role in keeping the town centre lively and connected. We can only continue this work with the support of local people and businesses, just as Benbow's supported us so generously over the years.

If we value independent shops, friendly faces, and a vibrant town centre, now is the time to show it. Wherever possible, please support local traders, use town-centre businesses, and spread the word about what Fakenham has to offer.

In the meantime, everyone at Active Fakenham wishes Nigel, Denise, Carol, and Melissa all the very best for the future.

Christ Church, Fulmodeston

We have our minds set on regrowth here in Fulmodeston at this time of year. In the last six months several properties have been sold and 'new blood' transfused into our village to bring a spot of rejuvenation. In the fields and gardens the slow and much-enjoyed process of greening and, in so many cases, yellowing, has begun. Funny how so many spring flowers are yellow.

So, it's a time of new ideas, new growth: and a time to contemplate afresh what Rev Tracy refers to as 'The rumour of Jesus' and what all that means.
